THE LEGEND

WEEQUAHIC HIGH SCHOOL
NEWARK NEW JERSEY
JUNE 1940
JAMIE L. LINDEN

Foreword

- The Class of June 1940 will soon join those who desire to fulfill the ambitions of their youth. Too often, grown youth becomes hardened and cynical, forgetting all the ideals that they once cherished.

We end our high school days and start a new phase of life, fortified with many plans and idealistic thoughts. Most of us have a guiding star that we intend to follow. Even though we are in the midst of cold realities, we still cling to our lofty aspirations.

So that the fire of our enthusiasm may not smolder, we hope that this Yearbook will serve to remind us not only of our high school life, but of the goals we planned to achieve.

—THE EDITORS

Dedication

- For her praiseworthy service to the student body, her unswerving devotion to class duties, and her comforting support in times of difficulty, we, the members of the Class of June 1940, most appreciatively dedicate this LEGEND to our class adviser, Mrs. Sadie Z. Rous.

To the Graduates of June 1940

• The famous British scientist, J. B. S. Haldane, once remarked, "Human inequality springs from two sources: nature and nurture." We are born unequal (how monotonous the world would be if we weren't), except as to the three "unalienable rights" that Jefferson mentioned in the Declaration of Independence. The purpose of education is, in part, to make us different; that is, more unequal—to develop individual differences, abilities, sentiments. Your education is of course not complete when you leave this school or any later institution: you can still continue your development and education as an individual by constantly seeking more learning, more knowledge, more wisdom. I hope you will do so and gain thereby the only solid happiness there is.

A Memoir

Some future day when I am young no more,
And friends of mine have gone along life's way,
I'll take this memoir from its guarded store
And glance throughout its pages all the day.

I'll see the friends who once were taught with me,
Within whose eyes there shone an eager light;
Whose one thought was "to be or not to be"
A name upon this earth within the right.

Remember Weequahic? Of course I do.
It was our Wigwam built upon the hill.
Its open portals met me when I came;
Before its Flag I stood, in reverence, still.

I studied in its wide and spacious rooms
For four long years that now seem all too short.
I learned the varied roads that lead through life,
And took to heart the things that I was taught.

Remember Weequahic? Of course I do.
It was our Wigwam built upon the hill.
Emblazoned by the sun against the blue,
It now stands etched within my soul so still.

In beauteous dreams, I see the days gone by,
And friendships that I made upon the way.
And may each one, as I, have this memoir,
To bring them memories through all the day.

—Elisabeth Cornely

ELIZABETH CORNELI

Farewell Weequahic

(Tune: "Auld Lang Syne")

*It is with pride we leave today
Our Wigwam on the hill;
And though we sing a sad adieu,
Our hearts are with you still.*

*You've held up high the torch of light
To guide us on our way;
And to your wisdom and your might
We dedicate this day.*

*The outside world is sometimes cruel
And we may get our fill;
But with the faith you've forged in us,
We'll meet it with a will.*

*Farewell, Weequahic, we leave you now,
Our aspirations high;
And hope you will remember us
As time goes swiftly by.*

The Declaration of Indignation

*W*HEN in the course of human events it becomes necessary for a senior class to dissolve scholastic bonds and to assume, among the ranks of the unemployed, the separate and equal station to which eighty-six credits and a sheepskin entitle them, a decent respect for the opinion of fellow-students requires that they should get the biggest kick possible out of graduation.

For four long years we have had reports and exams heaped upon us by an unfeeling faculty: They have maintained censorship of the press; they have forbidden to us the right of riotous assemblage; they have reported our absences; they have quartered proctors amongst us even when we were failing; they have turned our otherwise pleasant school life into a vale of worry and woe.

For four long years they have added immeasurably to our anguish. Let them now contribute to our merriment. Therefore, be it resolved that this section is, and of right ought to be, dedicated to our Faculty.

Marion Goodman.

Miriam Bujacker.

How Some Teachers Mark

Mr. Ackerman: "Someone had to get the "F", so it may as well be you."

Miss Beard: Approved is better than accepted.

Mr. Brodsky: S or SS for your notebook.

Mrs. Chosney: The more you write the better the mark.

Miss Conrad: $77 \frac{2}{3}$; $88 \frac{1}{3}$.

Miss Cuttriss: Two minuses make one lower; two pluses make one higher.

Mr. Ellis: "A+" and "F—".

Miss Goldhor: Gives that headache to her secretary.

Mr. Hartman: Try to figure out his code.

Mr. Hunkins: Marking Experiments: Accepted, accepted, rejected; accepted, accepted, rejected.

Mr. La Penna: One error A—; Two errors B+; Three errors B; etc.

Dr. Lewin: "B—rewrite for A"; "C—rewrite for B."

Dr. Lowenstein: Believes in the honor system, but is always on hand to carry it out.

Miss Nenycz: Likes the sight of D's.

Miss Righter: Anything below 90 is a failure

Mrs. Rous: Usually doesn't know how to write the first and second letters of the alphabet.

Mr. Schlee: According to the mood he's in.

Mr. Silberfeld: Only two "A's" to a class.

Miss Stevenson: "A" or "F".

Miss Wyckoff: To get an A or B you must do optional work.

- Mr. White: "Kindly wait in the balcony for me."
- Miss Wyckoff: "Now class, start a new page in your notebook."

What to Do In Some Teachers' Classes

Mr. Brodsky: Know your administrations.
Miss Cuttriss: Be prompt or else—
Mr. Donner: Remind him of Harvard.
Mrs. Harris: Drop your pencils promptly at the word stop.
Dr. Jellinek: Be business like.
Mr. LaPenna: Order the "Reader's Digest."
Dr. Lewin: Write him a letter.
Miss Reid: Be prepared for a homework quiz.
Miss Righter: Take over the class if she is late.
Mrs. Rous: Know your newspaper thoroughly.
Miss Stevenson: Bring in your cartoon of the week.
Mr. Weingast: Act like ladies and gentlemen.

What Not to Do

Mr. Brodsky: Smile, for his smile will outshine yours anyway.
Miss Cuttriss: Chew like Ferdinand.
Mr. Donner: Open your book in class.
Mrs. Harris: Keep your books on the top of the desk.
Dr. Jellinek: Mistake freedom for license.
Mr. LaPenna: Dream of your beloved; he is sure to find you out.
Dr. Lewin: Write on both sides of the paper.
Miss Reid: Stand for recitation.
Miss Righter: Slam the door.
Mrs. Rous: Get a swell head.
Miss Stevenson: Give her an excuse.
Mr. Weingast: Get him on the subject of leftists and rightists.

Riddle

What ja get in English—"A"?
Naw.
"B"?
Hardly.
"C"?
Never.
"D"?
Guess again.

Study Teacher

You come and sit;
Your thoughts, they flit;
You begin to talk;
Up the aisle
She starts to walk;
You stand.

Pedagog

Stern of eye with wrinkled brow
They peer above their glasses;
But often as you all see now,
Are "kidded" by their classes.

Leaving 104

Someday, in the future, when life seems a bore,
I'll look back and picture Home Room 104.
I'll see Dolly putting some cheers to a test
With stiff competition from all of the rest:
A class full of genius, of beauty, and poise
Must break the perfection by making some noise!

I'll think of tall Ewart, the humorous "guy"
Who'll think, not of me, but Marie, with a sigh;
There's Molly repeating what 'Confucius say'
To Lubin who's laughing and chewing away,
Without Miss Wilensky no picture's complete;
Those dimples swept "someone" right off his big feet.

Smart Caha (not ha! ha!) the Honor Roll bloke,
I'll see wink to Willard. "Come on, what's the joke?"
"Your hair is so lovely," I'll hear Arnold say:
"I once had a puppy whose hair looked that way."
Ruth Lentz and Estelle are inseparable friends,
Petite Beaty Gitter plays music that blends.

There's Leonard, the boy with the likeable grin;
The tardy bell rings, and 'yours truly' walks in;
I'll see Leon Friedman, our hero on track,
And Morty whose bravo laid him on his back.
Joe Sklon is a kibitzer—first on our list;
While Harriet Hirsch is new in our midst.

Miss Violet's changed and is no longer shy
Although all her marks are, as ever, quite high;
Sec' Practice to Mildred is just one long grind;
On Ruthy's report-card, not one F you'll find;
Blonde Josephine Golden has hair like her name;
To be ever smiling is Morris's aim.

Mim never was loud but "still waters run deep;"
When girls are around, you'll not find Ray asleep.
"Elaine, won't you tell us whom you like this time?"
(I might put him in here to make this line rhyme.)
I'll see Dotty Allgayer gaze off into space;
There'll be Sherman writing; I'll see Murray's face.

George Theile's in the picture; he's quite new to me;
If I left out Marian, where would we be?
Once more I'll hear Belle play a symphonic piece,
And see music, too, in the eyes of Bernice.
Miss Scaccia, dear teacher, forgive me this once,
In spelling your name, I remain quite a dunce.

Dear Classmates, we've come to the 'parting of ways';
We've shared hours of trouble and happier days;
Our four years together were friendly—sincere;
We'll treasure the memory of days we've spent here;
We've had disappointments and troubles galore,
But FUN was the keyword to Room 104.

—Dolores Zuckerman

A Visit to 223

As we peek thru the portals, and gaze at the mortals,
And wonder with joy and chagrin,
A group of pell-mells, racing the bells,
Practically hurtle us in.

As we brush ourselves off, and scuttle and scoff,
A giggle induces our smiles;
It soon amplifies, and to our surprise,
Miss Shank has the class in the aisles.

Realizing our plight, a ludicrous sight,
We knew that we looked quite gawky;
"Don't flush; use your head," a blushing lad said,
Whom we knew to be Mel Waukie.

Heeding his advice, Ruth Cohen thought it nice;
We proceeded to wander around.
We noticed a girl, in the midst of turmoil,
Named Faith, never uttering a sound.

Directly behind, quite out of his mind,
Jake goes hopping about,
Pulling the curls of the cute little girls;
While Edith and Gerty do shout.

There's Rhoda, Ed, and little Mildred,
Looking on with admiration,
While Sidney Shirts, between casual flirts,
Rehearses his next dramatization.

Helen and Marvin are practically 'starvin'
On money they collect for dues;
Dotchicle cheers and Irwin jeers,
While Henowitz unleashes with boos.

Hymen and Ted are battling instead
Of sparring according to rules;
While Joe, the Cynic, suggests a clinic
For such an array of fools.

Floppy Halpern gives Bernie heartburn
And Morris goes flop-flop-inside;
Lubetkin talks chess, and Shirley talks less,
While Dick makes them all step aside.

As Lloyd sings with glee about 'Rosalie,'
And Harriet whimpers forlorn,
Elliot's refused, and by Norma, abused;
He wishes he'd never been born.

As the bell is ringing and Torres is singing,
't seems that our visiting ends.
To mention you all, I had to use gall,
So please let us part, still as friends.

—Marvin Strauss

S. S. 219

Yes, 219 is our ship of state
Where Muriel and Gloria are always late.
There always seems to be a great to-do
Between Ochs, and Cohn, and Berger too.

Steve Argyris, in football hero style
To our captain, Miss Maier, is a great trial.
There are other members of our remarkable crew,
Sylvia, Lucille, and Scrivner too.

There's Betty Boffard, that adorable maid;
She charms the boys in every grade;
And Frances Borislow, I'm sure you know,
Can swing it high and swing it low.

There's always Ralph Berman and Alfred Green;
What they find to laugh at remains to be seen;
"Tish" and London will ne'er be forgot;
And Schreiber and Reisberg get around a lot.

Well, Dottie may be short and Miriam tall,
But that doesn't keep them from enjoying it all;
Miriam reads the notices and, when she's not there,
Dottie takes her place, for they're quite a pair.

But even so, I'm sure you could learn
A great deal from our distinguished Milty Stern.
So before we lift anchor and leave our port,
We'll welcome good-byes of every sort.

Yes, Weequahic knows just what we've got;
And it seems to me that's an awful lot.
But don't be surprised if you perceive
A few sad tears before we leave.

—Mildred Soroka

The Old Regime in 319

When the first morning bell rings in the air,
I walk into 319 to see what is there.
Hovering by the door with his hair plastered down,
Jerry "Janitor" Reshkin waits for B. Cohen to come 'round.
Marie McGurty pleads for our dues to be in,
In spite of the noise, in spite of the din.
Jane Kennington sighs and with languishing glance
Talks to each and all about John and Romance.
Jayne Lair sits and lends a willing ear
To all the gossip that she can hear.
"Little" Bob Gorlin explains to Margie Gross
The principles of "chem" that matter most.
Dot Schechner usually is hidden from view
By Green, Panzer and Lyons who,
Although they are the intellectuals of our class,
Fall under the spell of this cheerleading lass.
"Scatterbrain" Kramer is eager to elucidate
The details of last Saturday night's date;
And in this room, 'tis sad but true,
The more we studied, the less we knew;
So in back of the class with jokes and fun
Many copied their home work from Arthur Dunn.
Playing with the equipment on the "lab" table
Are Sophie Weiner and Ruthie Sable.
I suppose it's every homeroom's fate
To have one person perpetually late;
Martin Wallack cheers and gives a lusty yell
For Eugene Goldfinger has arrived before the bell.
And in spite of the fact that I'm not brilliant or witty,
I'm Jeanette Jacob, the author of this little ditty.

The Challenge

Aye, there he stands—
His head held high;
His spirits higher;
He stands, undaunted—in his eyes
A blazing fire.

And through the years,
The years to come,
Defeat may face him;
But his mind, once cultivated here,
Is firm to brace him.

Aye, there he stands—
His conscience clear;
His outlook clearer.
The world is good; opportunity near;
Success is nearer.

And through the years,
The years to come,
When things look dimmer,
The firelight in his eyes will gain
Their youthful glimmer,
And spirit, soul, and brain alike will say,
"It's up to me to do my best this day,
To send the doubt and sorrow from my heart;
It is my problem, and from all apart;
It's up to me to make my life the thing
I've wanted it to be.

It's up to me!"

Class Prophecy

Ham-Indian Show

(At Home 1960)

• With a cheerful crackle, the glowing embers fell against the sides of the red brick fireplace. The fat angora cat at her slipper-clad feet played with the yarn while, slowly and idly, MISS HARRIETT ROGERS rustled the pages of the "Old Maid's Morning Mail". Her spectacles resting on her nose flew off as, with a start, she peered at the big black advertisement in the paper. "Gala Show. Old time vaudeville! Tonight! Come one! Come all!" She hastily threw on her shawl, ("Sh'all" she had to wear) grabbed a pack of gum, (an old Weequahic habit) and dashed off in her old dilapidated 1940 Ford amid the zooming of the rocket ships.

(Entrance to the Theatre)

The typical Broad Street opening. The gleaming expanse of electric lights; celebrities of every sort rushing thither and yon. MR. MILTON STERN, the illustrious sponsor of this gigantic production, was at hand to welcome everyone to the "Ham-Indian Show"—the greatest, most stupendous, colossal show ever to disgrace the boards of the old theatre.

The Speaker of the "House", a dignified graying matron, MISS HELEN GORLIN, and the first man of the land, MR. DAVID LYONS, were among the first to arrive. Close by, the Secretary of the United States Mint, (Peppermint) MISS MAXINE ROSS, genially handed out samples of her wares.

Arriving with a "whish" that made your hair stand on end, came the Blond Triumvirate, AGATHA SKIPIT, BETTY BOFFARD, and MARIE MCGURTY, now currently starring in that mystery thriller, "We Do or Dye". Five dashing young men about town looking very debonair in cream colored trousers with pants to match were ROBERT SHACK, WILLIAM WEINSTEIN, EWART JONES, SOL ELSNER, and ALBERT SCHREIBER. (Just too, too——!)

SOL TOLSCHINSKY (with his mustache) ran madly about covering the story of this magnificent affair for the "Temulac" (read backwards), SANFORD WELLAN, that handsome lad, was in great demand by the ladies clamoring for their pictures to go into the Rotogravure section. His partner, RALPH BERMAN, caught ELAINE REINFELD and S. JERRY RESHKIN alighting from a taxi-rocket ship. As JERRY tipped his driver, NORMAN VOGT (He did so, and not a nickel either!) a sumptuous ship roared into a vacant hangar. Out stepped MILDRED SOROKA and her business partner, LILLIAN LEVINE. They had struck oil in their backyards while burying their school books after graduation.

The last to arrive were those two famous duet pianists, ELAYNE ENGBER and DOROTHY ZUCKER. ELAYNE had a heavy frown on her brow as she discussed with her partner their newest arrangement of "Tales From The Vienna Woods".

(IN THE THEATRE)

The air inside was tense with excitement. Would it be a successful failure? Chief Usher HERBERT OCHS perspired mightily in an effort to get the capacity crowd seated comfortably. A spirit of eager anticipation hovered over the buzzing crowd. The heavy curtain rustled as backstage RAY MILLER and CARL SEARCH hastily arranged the props. IRVING NEIWERT and EDWARD FAAS delayed them by their constant advice (unasked for and usually bad). JERRY MARSH and JACK GOLDFINGER were flirting with EDNA LEWIS and MYRTLE AMADA. Suddenly, the orchestra leader, BILL KERMODE, raised his baton and, with a final stirring, everyone settled down as the curtain rose.

ACT I

RICHARD STERN, as M. C., strode out amid a cheering welcome. "Now Ladies and Gentlemen," declared DICK, "Our first presentation, 'Those Powerful Weaklings' stars, those milk-fed boys from the fields of Chancellor Avenue—those Herculean monsters—BABE BERGER, FRANK SELWYN, STEVE ARGYRIS and SEYMOUR PULVER. A tremendous burst of hand clapping greeted their appearance. BERGER looked simply ducky in lavender trunks with green ribbon trim. IRENE PRAGER and ANNE NORTHWOOD, rival society editors, were seen to be industriously recording STEVE'S hair-pansies for posterity. SELWYN exerted all his strength. His muscles quivering with the effort, he slowly but arduously cracked a hard boiled egg in one hand. (Soft boiled would have been "eggseptionally" easy.)

Although the celebrated chorus missed their cue and made their entrance a few seconds late, they proceeded to "wow" the audience. Among the bevy of beauties we found BERNICE WARNER, as the torch singer, warbling, "I Need a Match". With a flurry of white petticoats and black silk stockings the chorus kicked their way into the audience's heart. The costumes were designed by CLAIRE WEISS and GLORIA KIRSCH. Among those in this chorus were RUTH GRUBER, SELMA MALMED, BETSY SPIRO, PHYLLIS BOHRER, ANITA SCHILLIN, DOROTHY NAUHAUSER, and the leader of them all, FRANCES BORISLOW. The male chorus executed several enchanting and tricky tap routines and you should have seen JACK STRAUSBERG, BEN LINZER, JOE LEFKOWITZ, and MARTIN JOBRACK go to town. (Hit it! Hot dog!)

As a marked contrast to those "jumpin' jives", a deep hush fell over the theatre as M. C. DICK STERN introduced ELEANOR TISCHLER, A.B., C.D., the eminent chemist, and her assistants, ROBERT GORLIN and PAULINE LITTMAN. Slowly and solemnly they turned to the only known people to have that dread disease, Gigglietus. (Laughing spells to the uneducated) HARRIET OPPERMAN, FLORENCE SHANK, FLORENCE SNYDER and EDITH KUPPERMAN were subjected to the crucial test. Graciously condescending to allow BOB to hold the cotton, (After all, what does he know about Chemistry?), DR. TISCHLER jabbed in the needle. Minutes of hushed, tense waiting—until the crowd was startled to see ELEANOR jumping around on the stage. "At last! I've found my unknown! It took me 10 years but I have proof now that it is the rarest of elements—GORLITTUUM! This combines with red lead and forms rejected experiments and "F's". (How well she knows that!)

The M. C. again announced to the audience, "Under the leadership of that golden-voiced tenor, LLOYD NIMEROFF, I present the celebrated mixed chorus." With sweet caroling MARY HOLLAND, NORMA GUNARDSON, MIRIAM ROSENTHAL, and BERNARD GINSBURG endeared themselves to the audience.

(INTERMISSION)

At this point the house lights came on revealing an interested and chattering crowd except for MIRIAM BUJACKER who was sound asleep in the first row. (Members of the Class of June, 1940, find it very easy to sleep.) Buzzing and chattering, a steady stream from the audience began to migrate toward the lobby. There, in the brilliantly illuminated entrance, DOLORES ZUCKERMAN and EDITH WILENSKY had their heads together whispering the latest gossip. Miss ZUCKERMAN had just flown in from Hollywood where she had been private secretary to that film magnate, ARNOLD BROTMAN. "Why, Hello!" They turned hastily to see JEANETTE JACOB beaming at them. "When did you get back?" she asked. "Why, we're here on a vacation. How are things here in Newark?" "Well, (Here she wet her lips so as to get ready for all the juicy gossip) remember EDITH LUBIN?" Did they! "Well, she and RUTH MATILSKY formed a partnership in a chewing gum factory. They aren't doing so well, however, because EDY chews up all the profits. Look, there's MORRIS LARKEY. He's an executive for "Short Pants, Inc.", and still a bachelor 'cause he's hard to 'Suit.'" Here she paused for breath. "That's BEATRICE AXT and JAYNE LAIR over there with MARVIN KRUMHOLTZ and JACK KAMINSKY. I never thought that JACK would ever open a book and yet they are making quite a success of their publishing house. It was rumored that they had just employed SHIRLEY HOFFMAN as efficiency expert, RUTH WEINSTEIN as adviser to advisers in their yearbook department, and CHARLOTTE BARER as their new advertising manager. Incidentally, the firm has just published a collection of poetry by SONIA HOLZMAN with illustrations by BETTY CORNELY.

MILDRED SKURATON and NORMA BOWMAN meandered over to join the group. MILDRED had left her resort home (Brighton) to attend this spectacle. "Did you know", she cut in, "SOPHIE WEINER has made quite a name for herself with her book, 'Cooking Weinies'?" "And while we're on the subject of former classmates," NORMA interposed, "How about JUDY WILNER and DOLLY ENGLERT who were elected the sweethearts of PHI BETA?" (The all-American girls.)

But now the house lights began to dim again and they hastily began seating themselves for the second part of the great "Ham-Indian Show".

ACT II

With a triumphant fan-fare of trumpets, SYLVIA MARIAS and her famous band of "Snake" charmers glided onto the stage. These sultry damsels made a magnificent sight with their pets twining and twisting about their bodies. AUDREY ALSOFROM had a cobra while JUNE BERMAN seemed indifferent to her rattlesnake. MARILYN KAMMERMAN'S python and ELEANOR NEWMAN'S copperhead aroused a murmur that traveled throughout the audience.

Clad in a long, black cloak, SEYMOUR LUBETKIN mysteriously announced that he, the only living person ever to perform the task, was going to juggle figures. Here his voice dropped to an eery whisper. BERNARD HAILPERIN interrupted loudly from his seat, "So that's how you passed Trig?" When the laughter died down, SEYMOUR was nowhere to be seen.

Now came the last act of our extravaganza, the Minstrel Show. It was introduced with remarks by MARVIN STRAUSS, who also announced that the next performance would include a dramatization of the sequel to his "Adventures of the Lone Stranger" which had created such a sensation in the class yearbook two decades before. Running out onto the stage came the two endmen, BERNARD KRAMER, and RICHARD GALE. Close on their heels and banging their tamborines, were JOE GRUBER, MILTON DYKMAN, HERMAN GREEN, JERRY SHIPMAN, ARTHUR ZORN and STANLEY ROSEN. Their jokes were so funny that they left the crowd in stitches, and even after they had "Buckwinged" their way off the stage, the applause continued for some time.

"Arthur, Arthur!" shouted the audience, and to the accompaniment of roars of laughter, came out two ARTHURS, DAVIS AND WINTER. Their blackface costumes fitted outrageously. ARTIE DAVIS almost created a riot when the brilliant red patch on his pants forgot why it was there and—(censored!).

(FINALE)

But alas! the orchestra began the Grand Finale. The heavy red curtain fell slowly as the glittering stars took their final bows. The enthusiastic audience cheered by their seats but the lights went up, and the theatre soon emptied of the bustling, laughing crowd. The floor and aisles were strewn with programs and an unnatural quiet prevailed. Outside the stage door stood MILTON SHOSHKES, an imposing figure in top hat and tails, waiting for one of the vivacious maidens. As this gallant young gentleman bore his lady off to a frolicking party, SEYMOUR HERBST and BERNARD RADO-WITZ, the doormen, gala in their gilt uniforms, slowly clanged the gate and, catching sight of a few lone stragglers, beamed cheerily and wished them a very good night.

Youth's Fancies

I dreamed that I was king of all
With lovely ladies in my hall,
And mighty armies at my call
When I was young.

I dreamed I was a knight of old
With lance of silver, shield of gold;
And people trembled, for I was bold
When I was young.

I dreamed I was a sailor free
Racing before a wind off the lee,
Just God and me and the open sea
When I was young.

But now adventure's call is dead,
And that leaves no more to be said.
For life is cold and youth has sped
And I am old.

—Seymour Josephson

SOCIETY SENIORS

The Blue-Blood

A friend of mine
(He'll have you know)
Has noble lineage.
His line of birth
Hangs from the girth
Of Harold and
Of Joan of Arc.
He boasts of Pilgrims
In his tree.
Yet he, it surely seems to me,
Comes from the Indians instead.
And when this friend,
He comes to me,
To tell me of his ancestry,
I tell him that I'd rather be
Just me—not he,
The sap of his high family tree.
Yet now it does occur to me,
We seniors have an ancestry,
Or maybe yet a quality
Possessed by few.
Yea, sooth!
We were all born
Quite early in our youth.

Robert Gorlin

Senior Statistics

[Weequahic's "400"]

A BEWILDERED little freshman came timidly up to an all powerful senior, one sunny day, and squeaked in a tremulous voice, "Sir, why do you seniors call yourselves Weequahic's '400'?"

"Why?" The deep, all-important voice of the senior resounded as he repeated the freshie's question. The glare left his eye; his face softened, to think that one could be so ignorant.

"Well, now I'll tell you;" he answered "it is because we have everything that high society has." He then began to enumerate:

"Society has its champagne, we have our Coca Colas.

Society has its gorgeous clothes; we have our beautifully attired sharpies.

Society has its coming out parties; we have our Prom.

Society has its commonplace Astors, Vanderbilts and Rockerfellers; we have such glittering names as Smith, Jones and Cohen.

Society has its horse shows; we have our football games where the same amount of beef is lined up.

Society has its days at the races; we have our 'ponies' too.

Society has its social ostracism; we have the school office.

Society has its Blue Book which nobody reads; we have our Calumet."

So saying the mighty senior, having proved his point, waved his wrist indicating to the freshman that his period of grace was over. He hurried after a cute little thing while the freshie hopped on his Kiddie Car and drove madly off in the opposite direction, vowing never to appear so stupid again.

But one thing that the senior neglected to include was that Society has its "Social Register." Thus for the specific purpose of compiling a record of the momentous deeds of Weequahic's "400" and to take a peek into the future after we have our "Coming-out Party," we give you the statistical section of the Yearbook which is dedicated to posterity.

So gentle reader, recline in your three legged backless stool; fill your Turkish pipe; turn the pages and spend a half hour or three with Weequahic's "Low-brows."

—David Lyons.

LITERATURE

To A Poet

Aye, poet, dip thy plumed pen and write.
Transform the filth and grime of ugly earth
To ardent shrines of beauty, warmth, and light;
Aye, dip thy pen—for well ye know its worth.

Thou art a thief, good bard, a paltry thief!
Thy great or meanest thoughts are not thine own!
They reek of earth and sky, of limb and leaf;
They smell of sod the winter winds have blown.

And yet, if stole ye not, I dread to think,
Good bard, how dull this world would be to those
Who missed thy pen, thy great, immortal ink,
And found no beauty in the blushing rose.

Let cynics scoff and fools deride! I ken
What power lies behind thy plumed pen.

—Sonia Holzman

Something to Find

While discarding my books with solacing looks,
An uncertainty vexed my mind;
I've worked and attained, sweated and gained,
And still have something to find.

It's something I've met, but haven't as yet
Known well enough to portray;
It's governed by chance, success and romance,
And laws that we all can't obey.

Its beauty is found where joys most abound;
Its ire has subjected kings;
To the minds of Evil it brews upheaval;
To the souls of Good it sprouts wings.

The longer it grows, the faster it goes;
No walls can restrain its flight.
Its father is Time; its mother, sublime;
Its children are ever in sight.

We're not the first, nor hardly the worst
To tread its equivocal way;
Where the leaders fall, the successors install,
As they march in eternal sway.

The confluence of all, the large and the small,
The failures, successes and strife,
Seem to reveal, that it's vain to conceal
The thing as the Pathway of Life.

—Marvin Strauss

Transition

Sunset, fading light,
Evening Star and the night.

Waning Moon, coming day,
Light itself is on its way.

Roosters crow; sleepy eyes,
Morning news, fond goodbyes.

Varied work through the day;
Supper soon is on its way.

Sunset, fading light,
Evening Star and the night.

—Elisabeth Cornely

Ode to Autumn

I am a part of the color of autumn.
Mine is the call of the bird on the wing.
Gone from my throat are the songs of the summer;
Faint is the echo and fragrance of spring.

I am the object of rapt fascination—
Scattered before me are secrets unknown.
Gold is the grain and the pumpkins are bursting;
Leaves from the lips of the wild winds are blown.

Grasses are dampened by frost in the morning.
Days that were misty are tranquil and clear.
Hazel-nuts ripen and apples are falling.
Fresh are the tracks of the doe and the deer.

Asters are claiming the fields and the meadows.
Skies are now stenciled with scarlet and gold.
Strewn in the earth's bulging womb are the seedlings,
Born of the rain in an intricate mold.

Robins have flown from their nests to the southland.
Farmers are piling their golden-sheathed grain.
Clusters of grapes and of wood-bine are drooping,
Flowers are drinking the last drops of rain.

These are the gifts and the pleasures of autumn,
Here are the mysteries words can't impart.
Questions are asked but answers are hidden,
Kept from my eyes and my ears and my heart.

Mine is the glory and color of nature;
Madly and gladly I drink of its wine.
I am a part of the autumn I worship—
Hear me, oh Autumn, I kneel at your shrine.

Yours is the secret of birth and creation.
Sown are your seeds for a new generation.

My Merry Mood

When the day is clear,
The sky is bright;
I have no fear;
My heart is light.

I want to dance;
I want to sing;
I want romance
My heart can bring.

My spirits high,
The world's all right;
My sorrows die;
And joy's in sight.

The flowers bloom;
The buds awake;
And I assume
It's for my sake.

I feel the urge to live;
It brings my soul to life;
I feel the urge to give;
Help others in their strife.

I love to be like this,
As Nature I intrude;
My soul is full of bliss
In this, my merry mood.

—Claire Belfer

An Awakening of Hope

I looked out upon the dreary world
Where my body had been hurled;
And I was tired and ill at ease;
Yet nothing could my soul appease.

Would life seem always cold and dark?
Could ever I find of hope a spark?
I stood still, and held my breath,
Looking for peace in thought of death.

But all's in vain; for what was there
That would ever a broken heart repair?
I did not worry; I did not care;
For I was ready to end it there.

Then suddenly there came a rumbling;
It seemed as though the earth were crumbling;
I stood there frightened and ready to die;
I neither talked nor uttered a cry.

Lightning streaked the darkened sky,
Just like an arrow, passing by;
The world grew dim before my eyes;
And I stood still without surprise.

Out of a daze, my head I raised;
Oh, then eternal life I praised;
For all my strong and bitter feeling
Left me, after life's chaotic reeling.

Then I hoped that every bitter soul
Had heard and seen the skies unroll,
Which opening up the portals wide,
Showed Heaven pure and bright inside.

—Benjamin Linzer

To Our "Wigwam on the Hill"

I walked one day up on the hill
And saw you standing there;
And noticed, with a sudden thrill,
Your grand and boastful air.

At first I stopped to stand and gaze;
My awe and wonder grew.
And then, in mingled doubt and praise,
I sang these words to you:

"So proud, majestic, stately,
You tower towards the sky;
With calm and splendid dignity
You hold your head so high.

What worthy fame have you acquired;
What brilliant victory;
What noble feat has so inspired
That pride which all can see?"

A royal smile spread o'er your face;
Your spirit did not quail.
Undaunted, certain, unafraid,
You told your wond'rous tale:

"Within my walls some children came,
Unripe, perplexed, and then
I nourished and enlightened them,
And sent them out as men!"

—Lillian Levine

The Nation of Our Choice

Let me hear that song
Of waving fields of wheat,
Of men who are the strong,
And blazing, blinding heat.

Let me hear that cry
That echoes through the land,
Resounding from on high
That we should fight and stand,

To make this Nation ours,
This land of golden corn,
Of cities where the towers
Half heavenward are borne.

Though there be flooding rain
And there be windswept clay,
No other land can stain
This land in which we stay.

Here is beauty seen
And beauty yet to be,
We dearly love this land.
For here, WE ARE THE FREE.

—Elisabeth Cornely

The Blue Giant

I.

I have a story to tell to you
About a giant of purest blue.
He was taller by far
Than most men are,
But not so cruel
That he'd make you eat gruel.
He was sturdy and strong
As the day was long;
His teeth were as white
As the stars at night;
And his eyes were as red
As Rose's fair head.
He had hair that could match
The sky's bluest patch,
And eyes that could shame
The fire's own flame.
All these virtues and more
I could add to his score,
But the one thing he lacked
Was the virtue called tact!

II.

He could snicker and smile
In an arrogant style,
And bellow and shout
'Til the stars came out.
He would wiggle with joy
His ears for a boy,
Or cut off a curl
For a shy little girl,
Or wear, if they chose,
A ring in his nose.
He was fair and as good
As he possibly could,
And never his name
Was darkened with shame;
For he was as true
As his name was Blue.
And now, with my pen,
I will sum up again
That the one thing he lacked
Was a virtue called tact!

Continued

III.

But lo! One fine day
Romance came his way—
He had fallen in love
With a heavenly dove!
But his red-headed Rose
With her sweet freckled nose
Put him to shame—
Thus blotting his fame!
And what reason, you say,
Made her act this way?
Why, dears, can't you guess?
His lack of finesse!
For although he was strong
As the day was long,
And his heart was as good
As it possibly could,
He just couldn't make love
To his heavenly dove—
For the one thing he lacked
Was a virtue called tact!

IV.

Aye, he still lives alone
In his house made of stone;
Bent by his age
Like a dog-earned page.
But lest you forget,
May your eyes become wet
With pity and tears
To comfort his years.
He is taller by far
Than most men are,
And ever as true
As his name is Blue.
But he'll always regret,
And will never forget,
How he once lost fair Rose
With her sweet freckled nose.
But again I'll repeat
(Ere I'm forced to retreat)
That the one thing he lacked
Was a virtue called tact.

—Sonia Ruth Holzman.

Commercial Law

Torts, misdemeanors, nefarious crimes;
Are you competent? These are hard times.
Have you prepared your daily intent to defraud
By long legal terms? Are you not awed?
How is your contract, valid or void?
Voidable maybe because you're a boy.

Can you withdraw or accept it by mail?
If you don't do it, can they put you in jail?
Do you know all the answers? I hope you all do,
For if you know all the answers you're in the right pew.
You're an embryo lawyer, a wonderful sage;
You can argue and prove it by citing the page.

So let's all "hail" to the practical course
That will help you in life when buying a horse
Or a wife or a house or a car or a train,
And aid you in making financial gain.
Let us doff our hats and stand in awe
To a practical course, Commercial Law.

—William Cohn

Chem. Lab.

You come into the lab., and unlock your drawer,
Get out your manual, and then you get sore.
This is a hard one; it'll take you all day;
The fumes'll kill you; you'd better go away.

It's always a gas or a poisonous thing,
Or something'll burn or ignite;
Or blow up the place with a boom or a bing;
Or it gives all the girls a big fright;

Or the tubing won't fit in the stopper;
Or the test tube's cracked on the end;
Or the stopper's too small for the bottle;
Or the rubber tubing won't bend;

Or your partner forgot the equations;
Or he lost the figures you need;
Or you don't know the test for the unknown base;
Or you don't know how to proceed.

Although we may grumble and say the work's "tough";
It seems that we can't ever get quite enough;
Because, all in all, the work's lots of fun;
And you feel very sad when it is all done.

—William Cohn

Humor

I learned there was some humor
Planted in this book;
And when I heard the rumor
I knew I'd have to look.

You see, I love the witty things
That come so rough and ready,
If told by minstrels, bards, and kings
Or even paupers petty.

Humor is where you see it,
If just you care to look;
In life and love and ladies' hats
And even in this book.

So if this section makes you laugh
In a hundred years or so,
Although by age I'm bent in half,
I wish you'd let me know.

The Education of Hymie McCohen

With trembling lips and knocking knees,
Hymie McCohen—a frosh if you please—
Wended his way to Weequahic High;
He wore a jacket and a green bow tie.
Although he was but four feet five
He was the proudest lad alive.

"I'll be an athlete and man of brain," he mused;
"No senior shall scare me or have me confused;
Everyone shall know of me, Hymie McCohen;
The press shall roar; the girls shall phone;"
And so with earnest endeavor and unfailing aim
He tried to attain his due glory and fame.

Alack and alas! Though 'tis true Hymie tried,
When the term ended he could have cried
To see those "F's" so red and clear
While the words of the coach rang in his ear,
"You can't be an athlete; you're too small;
But you can carry water for those who play ball."
One thing kept him from complete dolor,
He soon would be a sophomore.

The heights Hymie reached in his second year
Branded him a nuisance, for the little dear
Was a locker snapper; and what is more,
McCohen joined the ranks of the Sagamore;
He cut school; he used a Latin pony;
He cheated on exams; he was a phony.

One day a classmate whom he could not abet
Said, "I'm on the staff of the Calumet."
Hymie decided he too would try
To be a reporter. The little guy
Therefore went ahead. He confessed his whim
And, strangely enough, they accepted him.
He snooped so well, the story goes,
That in his junior year he became Needlenose.
Exultantly he snickered, "I'm the hero
Who's got a conscience rate of 'zero'."
He wallowed in scandal, delighted in dirt,
And was picturesque in a polo shirt.

The senior year came all too soon;
The days led on to the month of June;
And because school life was almost thru,
Hymie discovered lots to do.

He started a petition to nominate
Himself as a presidential candidate;
By methods of threat and of blackmail
His petition was signed. "I'll not fail,"
He was heard to say.
Then came the fatal day.
Ballots were counted: results were known;
393 for Snigelfritz; 1 and 1/3 for McCohen.

Hymie then decided to take a look
At those who composed the class yearbook.
He tried for a place by day and by night;
His only detriment, "inability to write."
Finally they made "Persistance" glad
By sending him to get an ad.

Time marched on with a lagard's step,
But McCohen was full of vim and pep
For in his brother's suit he'd try to dance
With his glamour girl at the Prom—ah, Romance!

With gown too small and hat too big,
Hymie marched in with his graduation rig.
A typical senior crammed with knowledge, and stuff,
And the ability to pass by sham and bluff.

If you should say, "This can't be true,"
Oh, skeptic senior, just look at you.

—Jeanette Jacob

Valedictory in Slang

G'wan, put away your pen.
G'wan, throw away them books.
And say, are you mice or men?
Nix on the doity looks!
Gee, I know you ain't 21,
And your life's jest begun;
And your school days is done!

G'wan, throw away that ink;
G'wan forgit biology;
Forgit that you could think
And be happy kids; you're free!
Gee, you ain't yet 21,
Things have jest begun;
Git out and have some fun!

Now don't git me all wrong;
You know life ain't jest a song.
Dough comes in handy, too;
You gotta woik when fun is through.

Don't take nuttin' much to heart;
Remember this is jest the start,
And life is pretty long.
Now git home where yuh belong.

G'wan, scram, all youse guys;
They ain't tears that's in my eyes.
Remember, keep your chins up high;
Lots o' luck you kids—gubye.

To the Humorous

Oh thou, who are so humorous,
Can'st thou not think a bit
That all thy jokes, though numerous,
Have not an ounce of wit?

Class Pest

He's a slapp-happy fellow
With a sense of humor;
Some say he's all right,
But it's only a rumor.

Freshman

He climbed up every flight;
He sought in vain all day;
Poor kid was in a plight;
He couldn't find room
One hundred seventeen "A".

Sagamore

Stop that running!
Throw away that bag!
Resisting an officer?
Here's a tag.

Guess Who

His shoes are cream; his tie is red:
His coat is labeled "Larkey".
His shirts a scream,
With stripes of green——
You guessed it; he's a sharp.

Metamorphosis

'Twas back in the halls of old Weequahic
In the years that have vanished and gone,
When we Senior A's were all Freshmen;
(I beg pardon, now don't start to yawn
Until I have finished my story.)

Yes, those were the years of our glory
When erasers and spitballs flew high,
When we thrilled as we passed by a Senior
In the years when our minds were quite spry.

This 'eon' gave way to our great second year
When we teased all the Freshmen, and posed with a sneer.
We made money on passes we knew wouldn't work;
And as we passed Juniors, they said with a smirk,
"We know you are Sophomores, so none of your guff;
We Juniors know Chaucer and Physics and stuff!
But what do you know? I bet nothing at that,
But Geom. and Bio. and a little of Lat."

Hot Dog! We were Juniors; Oh boy! Now at last
We could stick out our tongues at the Freshmen that passed.
We made faces at Sophomores; we now knew it all;
But still looked with envy at Seniors so tall.

We're Senior A's now and we worry enough
'Bout these "dern" interviews and our pictures and stuff;
But our views are all changed and the school's in a hearse;
The lunchroom's a playground; the service is worse.
We mimic the teachers, and cut our reviews;
We talk in the studies, and spread 'round the news
That Jayne's going steady; and Norm's got a car;
Milt's going to Harvard—"I'll bet he'll go far!"
We're all for reforms, but we don't do a thing.
On dates, we're in "College"; and we all vote for swing.
The Prom's got us worried. "Oh, whom shall we take?"
Is the usual query. Oh, what a headache!
We oppose all elections and make a big row;
We boo the decisions and to rules do not bow;
We go up "down" stairways; get points off for gym;
And vote for a pool so we Seniors can swim.
We call teachers by first names just so they can hear
How important we are in our late Senior year.

Chapter XV

Final Chapter of the Adventures of the Lone Stranger

AS YOU all remember, devoted followers of the Lone Stranger, we last left our hero exposed to the icy WINTER GALE after he had TORRES pants. We now pick up our idol emerging from his SHACK, sporting his new VIOLET knickers. The masked man waits at the crossroads for his devoted Indian guide, GINSBURG. As FAST as the wind, the half-breed gallops up on his BROWN stag to his exhausted friend. With an expressionless face the Indian shouts: "—Lone Stranger—, uhh, —MEDBURY junction ugh,—just captured by ferocious Indians—ugg,—HARRIET up—ugh, White men captured—taken to big Wigwam on Hill!"

The ANGER of the Lone Stranger is wrought, ANNE with a surge of NEUPAUER, he mounts his super-steed. His KAMMERMAN eyes SEARCH the NORTHWOOD for a BRIEF moment, and then with a mighty lunge he SPURS the creature onward! As the two GOODMAN ride out of the picture, DORIS heard the famous, "Stretch out those LEEN legs of yours; Hi-Yo SILBER, away!"

We now join our heroes as they stealthily creep towards the Indian Camp, which is overrun with RUTHless and bloodthirsty savages. As their X-Ray eyes penetrate thru the COHEN-shaped tents, they see the survivors strapped unmercifully to the stakes, ready to be burned. The victims are not only being HIRT and tormented, but are suffering OLSOFROM cruelty, and are on the VERGER of starving from 'UNGER. HOWARD you like to be in their place? Be FRANK; SHIRLEY you wouldn't. GINSBURG then AXT the Lone Stranger what to do. The masked man replied in a sordid tone, "I DUNN know." We SEYMOUR of the barbarians as the LEDER of the BOWMAN hysterically ignites the shrubbery, which BURNS readily.

The two men are held spellbound as the captors dance around the stake, chanting frantically their tribal sound: "Boomboom, boomboom,—boomboom, boomboom; Let's go "Weak-WEG." As the greedy flames SCALE the burning shrubs, a desperate plan BLOOMS in the Lone Stranger's master-brain. What WILLY do? SHALIT be something drastic? As the flames envelope the doomed victims, the masked hero is driven to immediate action. With firm, tense, tingers and a STERN countenance, he grapples for his weapon of destruction. GINSBURG sees a PEARLY white handle flash in the sunlight and his eyes fairily dance in their SOCKETs. The skilled MARXman takes careful aim and then PAULS the trigger. With a belch of fury, the gun blasts forth: not with the might of lightning; not with the anger of flames; not with the destruction of bullets, but alas, the Lone Sranger has used his most potent weapon, his ever-faithful, ever-dependable, his ever-reliable water pistol.

The surprised savages are awe-stricken by the sudden extinguishing of the flames and crumble, petrified, to the ground at the mercy of "The Great Masked White God." Seeing their apparent advantage, our saviours strut triumphantly into their wretched midsts and FREED the captives from their pyre. The FRIEDMAN rejoice exuberantly over their miraculous escape from death's clutches and begin to SKIPIT around merrily.

WELLEN no time, the Lone Stranger perceives that the Redskins would be submissive to his every command, so he arranges a compact between the white and red men which is bound by their FAITH and HONORE in the masked man. Alas, justice has triumphed again! Both parties, OWEN their peace and friendship to his intervention, plead with the Lone Stranger to accept some token of their esteemed gratitude, but our smiling demigod merely nods, "Justice has no reward but Triumph!"

With these memorable words, the masked rider of the plains mounts his stalwart steed, and summoning GINSBURG, RHODAlong the GREEN plains. As the two figures FADEM into the shadows, DORIS heard again that famous cry, "Hi-Yo SILBER, away!"

Senior W's

Fencing

EDWARD CAHA: Fencing is a comparatively new sport at Weequahic and several foilsmen have achieved a great deal of success. One of them is Eddie Caha, Captain of the 1940 team. He finished second, fourth, and ninth in the city, state, and national meets respectively, and was largely responsible for the team's victories this season.

Cheerleaders

At every sports event, one can find our loyal cheerleaders: SEYMOUR "SY" HERBST, Captain and junior advisor; DOLLY ENGLERT, a member for two years; DOTTY SCHECHNER and JUDY WILNER. Energetic and hard-working, they presented their formations with such precision that they won the praise of high school officials throughout the state.

Tennis

ROBERT SHACK: Bob "Bitsy" Shack, captain and number one man on the tennis team has helped considerably to make tennis more popular with the students. His endurance and ability to return seemingly impossible shots caused many an opponent extreme irritation.

RALPH BERMAN: Ralph, quick and canny, used strategy and well-placed shots to overcome his taller adversaries. Equally good as a singles or doubles player, he proved a great asset to the squad and was instrumental in the team's victory over their suburban rival, Hillside.

Basketball

NORMAN ELKIN: Norman, shy, modest, and unassuming, was probably the deadliest of pop shots in Weequahic basketball history, and his play was so outstanding that he was constantly praised by coach Henry Donn. He was always calm and dependable, showing up best when the contest was close and when every point counted.

WILLIAM WEINSTEIN: A stellar defensive man, and a great passer, Bill was one of the players largely responsible for the basketball team's enviable record. He broke into the varsity lineup two years ago, when as an inexperienced substitute, he was put into the Bloomfield game, and proved his ability by his sterling play.

SEYMOUR FLEISHER: Seymour, or "Zoom", as he was called by members of the basketball team, was a letterman for two seasons. He possessed great fight and agility, and often managed to wrest the ball from much taller opponents. For his aggressive type of play, Zoom was given honorable mention on the all-city and all-county teams.

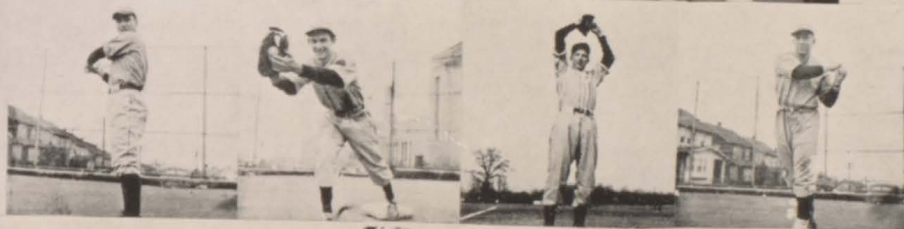

Baseball

LEONARD WEG: Leonard was the only bespectacled member of the varsity baseball team last season. He was an excellent outfielder and a very consistent hitter. At football, he was an excellent place-kicker, and he substituted at every line position but center.

JERRY RESHKIN: Varsity first baseman for two seasons and captain in his last year, Jerry "Red" Reshkin showed exceptional prowess as both a hitter and fielder. Having a love for the game, he was a tireless player and his example was an inspiration for other members of the squad. Throughout the seasons it was Reshkin who came through with flying colors in the pinches.

SPORTS

SPORTS

JOHN STEPCHUCK: Tall, lean, left-handed "Whitey" Stepchuck was for two years an outstanding hurler on the baseball team. He always had enough on the ball to turn in excellent performances. His most memorable feat was that of pitching the varsity to victory over a heavily favored South Side nine.

SEYMOUR PULVER: Seymour was, for two years, a star outfielder on our baseball team. He was our most aggressive player and showed most teamwork. A letter-winner in football for three seasons, captain and dependable ball-carrier in 1939, he leaves an impressive and enviable record behind him at Weequahic. His surging power and irresistible force made possible many large gains. He was also a great defensive cog, making a large percentage of the tackles from his backer-up position.

Track

LEONARD RESNICK: Lenny was a persevering and loyal worker on the track team. Two years ago, as a lean, lanky Sophomore, he showed great promise as a distance man in the city track meet. In the following season, he proved that he was a real prospect by earning his letter and winning a number of prizes.

FRANK SELWYN: Frank, the strong man of the school, was a real star in both track and football. He was probably the most outstanding all-around track man in the city, and won prize after prize in the pole-vault, the 200-yard dash, and the low-hurdles. In football, he was the actual winner of the South Side game when he caught a pass in the end zone for the score.

WALTER SCHWARTZ: Walter is one athlete who was not daunted by misfortune. In his first year as a member of the track team, he was forced to the sidelines when he suffered a broken leg. But he refused to accept defeat and the next spring he rejoined the squad and earned his varsity letter as a miler.

JACK STRAUSBERG: Jack is one of those very few runners who are equally good at sprints and longer distances. An extremely graceful runner, he was a consistent winner in both the quarter mile and 220-yard events. Because of his excellent record, he was one of the few Newark boys to be invited to run in the Board of Education track meet in which he made an impressive showing.

LEON FRIEDMAN: One of the best distance men seen hereabouts was Leon Friedman, captain of the 1939 cross-country team, and star half-miler on the track squad. A short boy, he made up for his lack of height by an excess of courage and stamina. He was a consistent point getter and won several medals in various events.

Football

MAX DONNER: Max, a big, husky, strong lineman who played first and second string tackle this year after three years of substitute line play, was a great asset to our own ball carriers and a headache to enemy backs. His improved play made it possible for first string linemen to come out of the game for a much needed rest.

STEVE ARGYRIS: Helping to make the right side of the line impenetrable, Steve Argyris well deserves the all-city tackle berth he won. He made numerous tackles, and opened big holes for the backs on the offense. He was recognized as a real team player and a good example for younger and less experienced linesmen.

MORTON ROSENSTEIN: Lady Luck frowned upon Morton Rosenstein this year when, early in the season, he broke his ankle. Thus the team was deprived of a man who had elevated himself from the ranks of the second team to that of a promising varsity star. We must give him credit for his fighting spirit and for his true ability which never really came to light.

IRWIN UNGER: Irwin Unger is a member of the class of hard-fighting scrubs whom coaches call "the real heroes" and backbone of the team. Though he was not seen much in games and headlines, he loved the game, tried hard, and spent afternoon after afternoon in the second-team games.

ARNOLD SCHUMAN: Arnold Schuman alternated at the guard and tackle spots during his second and last year of football. He proved himself a better than able line-man in the last South Side game, our first victory over that team. He was the unsung hero of that fray, recovering several fumbles, the first of which directly led to the game's only score, and the others continually kept our opponents at bay.

IRA BERGER: Chosen as an all-city end and one of the best defensive wing-men in the country, Ira "Babe" Berger closes his high school football career with a blaze of glory. Effective on the offense due to his pass-catching ability, and a bulwark on the defense, he was a player who knew what to do and when to do it. In basketball too, "Babe" won two letters and made a capable substitute when he wasn't on the starting five.

*W*E WISH to take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation to the Weequahic High School students for their confidence in appointing us official photographers to the June, 1940 LEGEND.

It has been a distinct pleasure to work with the editor and staff in producing what we believe to be an outstanding yearbook.

"Be Sure You're Right—

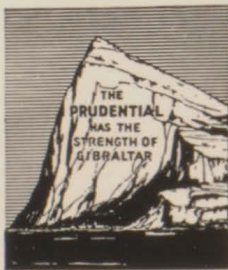

"Then," said David Crockett, "go ahead!"

Sound advice from a brave man.

Any youth can profit by it, when the time comes to adjust himself to the work-a-day whirl.

If he would be right let him study the careers of successful men, follow their example, and
